Maruyama, Masao, ‘Rittarihhikaito [kishidao seisin] wo megutte’ [‘On Ritterlichkeit [Chivalry]: Weber, Nietzsche, Maruyama’] (discussion held on 14 May 1988), in Maruyama Masao Techo [Masao Maruyama Notebook, a quarterly edited by his friends and former students] 38 (July 2006), 1–34, and 39 (October 2006), 1–29 (IB at 14); repr. in id., Wabunshu [speeches, discussions, interviews and essays], ed. Maruyama Masao Techo no. Kai [Masao Maruyama Notebook Association], 4 vols (Tokyo, 2008–9: Misuzu), vol. 2 (2008), 375–463 at 437

Note: when Maruyama died, the editors of Maruyama Masao Techo collected these pieces, which had not been included in his collected works.

In this discussion, when Carl Schmitt is mentioned, Maruyama says that when he was staying in Oxford, IB visited him and told him that ‘We have only one thing in common: both of us think Carl Schmitt is our honourable enemy.’ Maruyama guesses that somebody had told IB that he had studied Carl Schmitt, which he did from his early twenties. Maruyama acknowledges a debt to Schmitt.
